Celebrating 125 Years of Warehousing Innovation and We’re Just Getting STARTED

THE 2016 IWLA CONVENTION + EXPO
March 13-15, 2016 | Omni Orlando Resort at ChampionsGate | Orlando, Fla.

Keynote Speakers Announced

Branding Expert Kaplan Mobray
Wharton-educated, Mobray draws from more than 15 years of experience leading corporate marketing, advertising and brand development initiatives for Fortune 500 companies. As the best-selling author of The 10Ks of Personal Branding, Mobray teaches organizations how to develop inspired leaders, increase employee engagement and productivity, and unify diverse workforces for greater teamwork and company growth.

Back by Popular Demand: Economist Brian Beaulieu
One of the country’s most informed economists, Brian Beaulieu researches the use of business cycle analysis and economic forecasts to increase profitability. Beaulieu returns with a new data about the current business climate and planning strategies for growth in the warehouse logistics industry.

Industry Veteran Herb Shear
Herb Shear, former Executive Chairman and CEO of GENCO, shares his story of how he took GENCO from a $300,000 business to a $1.6 billion company.

This is a special time for the International Warehouse Logistics Association (IWLA): 2016 marks our 125th Anniversary. I am proud to lead the association into the next quarter century as I’ve grown to learn about our past, the challenges we’ve overcome, and the new opportunities ahead.

In 1891, a group of warehousemen decided that in order to achieve success, they needed to work together as an industry. They formed the American Warehousemen’s Association (AWA) for the greater good of the industry, their businesses, and economic stability. IWLA’s history reflects the progression of U.S. business: The association was a founding member of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in 1912.

In the earliest warehousing days, goods were moved by horse and carriage. Product was stored, managed, and processed manually. IWLA members worked to improve the system. They knew there must be a better way to warehouse, and together developed the processes that we know to be modern warehousing and the “new” third-party logistics industry.

This notion of continuous improvement holds true in today’s IWLA members: The companies you find on these pages drive industry standards, embrace innovation, and use advanced technology to improve service and value for you – their customers.

To that I say, “Cheers!” May we look on this milestone with pride and appreciation for those who paved the way. As you read through the companies in this directory, know that these are descendants of those who created the third-party warehouse industry and stopped at nothing to help manufacturers and shippers like you achieve success.

IWLA is, and will always be, the resource of warehouse logistics.

Sincerely,

Steve DeHaan
IWLA President & CEO

IWLA Warehouse Logistics Providers offer services to manufacturers for part or all of their supply chain management functions. Broadly speaking, these services include goods movement, warehousing and transportation services, and specialized value-added services that can be scaled and customized to fit customer needs. Specific, IWLA warehouse member companies provide transloading and cross-loading; assembly, sorting, packaging, re-packing, bundle packing, and re-working; pick-n-pack, kitting, and display assembly; sketch and shrink wrapping; web fulfillment and online inventory; inspection; consolidation; distribution; storage; import and export; transportation management, trucking, drayage, and local cartage; reverse logistics and return processing; port services; railcar loading and unloading; pool distribution; module building; EDI and RF WMS; as well as e-commerce. These needs are based on market conditions and the demands and delivery service requirements for their products and materials.

IWLA Logistics Partners supply goods and/or services to the warehouse logistics industry. These partners include warehouse management system providers; material handling equipment, racking, and loading dock manufacturers; insurance providers; staffing solution companies; lighting and energy services; security system manufacturers and consultants; attorneys expert in warehouse, employment, labor, compliance, and bankruptcy law; wireless long-distance providers; ISO certification; propan suppliers; real estate developers and green technology providers; financial strategies advisors; uniform and office supplies; and many others. These companies provide value by understanding the specific needs of the warehouse logistics providers, and in turn, tailoring their own products and services to help them save money and work more efficiently.

To get an idea of just how quickly the overall supply chain landscape is changing, consider the warehouse. With the exception of the folks who truly understand the myriad changes taking place within the four walls of today’s warehouses or DCs, these often overlooked structures frequently give up the spotlight to driverless trucks, behemoth ocean-going vessels and other marvels of innovation.

However, the changes underway in the supply chain are thrusting warehouses and DCs to the forefront.

A new report from Colliers International, “From First Mile to Last Mile,” finds that among the primary global factors that will impact the global warehousing and logistics sector over the next generation, the biggest is e-commerce.

Dwight Hotchkiss, Colliers’ U.S. national director of industrial and president of brokerage services, notes, “Our analysis finds that e-commerce and evolving delivery methods are the primary factors driving the shape of the logistics sector both today and in the future as e-tailing is slated to increase significantly in city and towns across the globe.” He goes on to say, “This will result in the creation of new and innovative space at the initial ‘First Mile’ level, including mega distribution centers, and the ‘Last Mile,’ where there is already a proliferation of e-fulfillment distribution centers on the edge of urban areas.”

The e-commerce impact is already visible in warehouses and DCs. Inventory turns and SKUs are on the rise as is the size of many facilities. Automation projects, including robotics, are gaining interest from operators who need to improve velocity, efficiency and accuracy. Investments in WMS and other software and technology, including voice picking and forklifts and other equipment, are also picking up.

Meanwhile, the food supply chain is feeling the effects of both e-commerce and the increase in imports and exports. Cold storage operators are expanding in every global region.

The history of the International Warehouse Logistics Association (IWLA) dates back to the late 1800’s. Undoubtedly, the IWLA and its members have witnessed profound changes over the years. The future is equally exciting and Food Logistics is proud to partner with the IWLA on this year’s directory.

Sincerely,

LARA L. SOWINSKI
